In Tribute to my Grandmother, Clara Mabel Mathews, who fostered my interest in family history, and whose notes formed the basis for this book.

PREFACE

This book is a genealogy of the descendants of William, John, and Robert Mathews who with their brother Thomas and their widowed mother Sarah emigrated from Northern Ireland in 1830 and 1831 and eventually settled on farms in Salem Township, Knox County, Illinois. Little is known about their father, John Mathews, and nothing about the ancestry of the family in Ireland. John and Sarah Mathews are shown as the first generation in order to record the few facts about them which are available; to list the brothers together in the traditional concept of a group of four; to incorporate the record of Thomas, who died without issue; and to name the common ancestor of all the descendants included in the book.

A record of this type was conceived at least as early as 1942, when the first annual reunion of the descendants of William Mathews was held in Elmwood, Illinois. Efforts to accumulate data were directed solely toward this branch of the family until 1947, when the scope of the reunion was broadened to include the descendants of John and Robert Mathews. The scope of this book was similarly enlarged at that time, adding greatly to the task of compilation and requiring additional years to complete the project. But it has made publication in this form possible and has the advantage of combining in a single volume records of all the branches of this Mathews family resident in America.

Reference to numerous sources was made in the course of the extensive research necessary to produce these data. Chief among them for the early generations were the record pages from the Family Bibles of William, John, and Robert Mathews, scrapbooks compiled by Mary Jane Montgomery Mathews and Sarah Nancy Mathews Maxwell, and gravestone inscriptions. In the National Archives was found a copy of the passenger list of the ship Inez, dated June 18, 1831, containing names and ages of Sarah, William, Thomas, and Robert Mathews. There also the original census schedules for Knox County and other locations in the Censuses of 1840, 1850, 1860, and 1870 were searched, as were the pension files of Civil War veterans in the family.

Atlases, platbooks, county histories and biographical albums, other Bible records and scrapbooks, genealogies and histories of families intermarried with the Mathews family, newspaper files, college registers, regimental histories and war records, and directories of various kinds were other valuable sources. Birth, death, and marriage records in the Knox County, Illinois courthouse in Galesburg, Illinois were personally examined and copied. Also personally examined were the records of the First Presbyterian Church of Kensington in Philadelphia. Additional data were obtained by correspondence from official files of other counties and institutions, and from persons related to wives or husbands of descendants. Data on the later generations were obtained for the most part through questionnaires and worksheets completed by the individual families.

Practical limitations prevented inclusion of this complete documentation, which will be preserved and made freely available. Likewise, it was decided not to attempt to combine narrative history with these data, in anticipation of a general history of the Mathews family.

While every precaution was taken to insure the accuracy of this record, errors doubtless exist, as is probable in any book of this type. Corrections and additions should be reported and will be incorporated in any future supplement to be published.

The form of entry requires no detailed explanation. Unmarried descendants are listed but once; married descendants are assigned numbers and carried forward to individual entries. The names in parentheses following the name at the beginning of each entry show the line of descent from the common ancestor. A variation from the usual practice is the use of entry numbers in place of generation numbers within the parentheses, facilitating reference backward along the line of descent.

Names are given in full; nicknames and short forms of names have been avoided. Initials are used only when they stand for no name or when the full name was not known. Particular attention was paid to spellings of names.

The scheme for showing the locations of births, deaths, and marriages does require explanation. Most of the early families in this record resided on farms, and the majority of the births and deaths and many of the marriages in this period occurred in farm homes. In such cases, township and county is shown as location, for those states which have the township form of organization. A town or city is not listed as a location unless the event occurred within the limits of that place. Some of the sources show a town as birthplace, for example, when actually the birth occurred several miles away, the town named being either the nearest community located on a map or the post office address or both. It was not the place of birth, and a special effort has been made to avoid that type of error. In no case has a post office address been used in connection with a farm location.

Many persons contributed in one way or another to the production of this book, and I extend my sincere thanks to each one. The degree of coverage achieved testifies to the cooperation and support extended me. It is my earnest hope that the book justifies that support.
